I enjoy using maps and writing down coordinates the original way, setting the gauges, and watching for gyro drift while still making it accurately to destinations without the aid of GPS.. 99 to be worth I am training in real life for a PPL on the Cessna 152, and I wish for a more accurate and usable simulator version for when I am not flying in real life.. No autopilot, of course, but the elevator trim works well, which takes a load off.. If you want to stare at the views for hours while flying with the aid of autopilot, then go with the 172.. Developed by Carenado, the C152 II for FSX: Steam Edition includes two model types (with and without gear fairings) in four liveries, with high quality textures, an animated pilot and accurate modelling of details including antennas, wheel chocks, fuel caps and baggage area.. I really like it I was checked out in 150's back in the 70's and this brings back memories..
